Our General Counsel support service is a support offering developed specifically for in-house counsel. We have brought together a team of Forensic professionals with deep experience working with General Counsels as they resolve complex challenges.

Single point of contact for a full suite of support services.

Dedicated access to market leading industry professionals.

Immediate connection into KPMG's global network providing support wherever you do business.

On-demand support as much or as little as you need, when you need it.

Our team of Forensic professionals are here to support the General Counsel

Today's organisations are facing a more complex regulatory environment, changing demands from shareholders and a focus on trust, integrity and culture.

Increasingly, the General Counsel is at the centre of these critical governance issues for their organisations. Clearly, the role of the General Counsel is becoming increasingly multi-faceted and more is being asked of those who perform it.

KPMG Forensic has developed a dedicated support service for General Counsels to help them navigate these new challenges.

Based on years of working with in-house counsel we understand General Counsel support needs to be:

- available on demand
- scalable, so you get the level of support when and where you need it
- consistent delivery across Australia and beyond
- single point of contact
- transparent fee structure
- led by a team who are experienced working with legal counsel.

Our commitment to our General Counsel clients is that whether it is anti-bribery compliance, commercial disputes, litigation support, computer forensics or complex investigations we will have the right people for you at the right time.

Our commitment extends to a single transparent pricing structure, so when you need support you can focus on what matters most, without needing to negotiate new contracts when the focus needs to be on timely resolution of critical issues.
