

Improving lives through quality care

Enhanced services. Modernized delivery. Optimized community care. These were the objectives behind Hamilton's mission to transform over 500,000 lives through the creation of an integrated population-level health approach.

KPMG facilitated a group of Hamilton's leading healthcare stakeholders, city leaders, and industry experts through a process to align on a vision for a new model that would improve service coordination and delivery throughout the region. This involved extensive research into relevant jurisdictional case studies, leading practices and feedback from the community leaders. These consultations informed a draft healthcare model blueprint, which we presented to over 70 stakeholders during an interactive summit.

Guided by the community's feedback, we're now moving forward on a final draft report that will guide the path forward for a more integrated health system in Hamilton. Our collective goal is to advance a new and more sustainable approach to health and social care in Hamilton and, in so doing, inspire health system reform across Ontario and Canada.

From the very start, Hamilton's Integrated Population Health Approach has been about more than improving service delivery and product development – it's been about advancing the quality of care and support for all who need it. Thanks to intense industry collaboration, and a game plan built on real industry data, Hamilton's healthcare leaders are now positioned to inspire a modernized approach to community care.

We deliver the results that matter.
