Qatar Change Readiness Index

The country has jumped seven places in the last couple of years.

CRI measures a country's change readiness against the below three main categories.

Government capability

The ability of governmental and public regulatory institutions to manage and influence change.

Enterprise capability

The ability of private and state-owned organizations to manage change and grow within a dynamic economic environment.

People and civil society

The ability of individual citizens and wider society to cope with change and respond to opportunities.
