

Tax Alert

Issue 26 | December 2021

Property tax has, in recent months, received some attention as an example of a progressive wealth tax. However, there has been less discussion of how property tax laws can be tweaked to bolster Singapore's pivot towards the future economy. In an opinion editorial published in The Business Times, See Wei Hwa, Partner, Tax, KPMG in Singapore, suggests that some of the seemingly archaic provisions of the property tax system should not hold back investments in deep technologies today. Instead, property tax laws should facilitate the country's efforts towards becoming a leading global technology hub.
