Two different routes to transformation

Traditional

KPMG Powered Enterprise

A narrow focus in the planning phase – working out how to make the technology solution fit what you already do.⁵

Hundreds of pages of information for you to review, mapping an unfamiliar system to your business requirements.⁵

A slow journey of roughly 7 months to arrive at the build phase and see any form of working solution.⁴

Around 5 months spent on testing and correcting unforeseen problems.⁴

A limited skillset to help you, with some knowledge of the technical platform but little or no finance expertise.⁵

of finance transformations don't deliver on their forecast outcomes or cost objectives.⁶

48% of transformations that deliver immediate cost savings don't sustain them.⁶

Over 1,700 leading practices and design considerations.

1 target operating model based on proven methodology.

Just weeks from the start of the project to show a working, pre-configured solution.

Up to 50% faster than traditional ERP implementations.⁴

Varied teams, formed with KPMG member firm specialists in business change, finance, and technology.

Accelerating into the future

Imagine a...⁷

45% cut in general accounting costs

20% saving in budgeting and forecasting expenses

15% improvement in working capital

50% reduction in manual reconciliations

2 reviews of the target operating model every year, as best practice evolves
