Transactions in general have the power to create, preserve, or weaken value. Corporate restructuring, acquisitions and new investments, mergers, carve-outs, joint ventures, and funding are examples of transactions which undeniably encompass complex and material tax issues. The KPMG LATAM Complex Transactions Group (“LATAM CTG”) can assist institutional investors, asset managers, multinational companies, and start-ups in navigating such nuances, as well as with strategic transactions by bringing together KPMG tax professionals from different member firms across the region with the necessary technical proficiency, industry knowledge and transactions experience.

About KPMG LATAM CTG

The KPMG LATAM Complex Transactions Group links multinationals and investors to tax professionals and resources across the KPMG member firms to provide a wide range of regional tax-regulatory knowledge.

Whether in Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Chile, Mexico or other countries in Latin America, the LATAM CTG team is prepared to identify the right resources to provide strategic advice on cross-border or domestic tax matters, addressing complexities of multiple tax systems and supranational regulation. The LATAM CTG team offers a different way to help businesses uncover opportunities, manage risks, and create more value with each deal.

The LATAM CTG team devotes time to learn about your business needs, goals, and vision for each deal and includes professionals with extensive experience in sophisticated M&A transactions, corporate restructuring, structuring private equity and venture capital funds, strategic tax advice for startups, corporate reorganizations / rationalization, green field and brown field investments, and supply chain optimization, both domestic and cross-border.

The challenge

The tax teams of institutional investors, asset managers, and multinational companies or start-ups in Latin America are confronting tax law changes, as well as regulatory constraints. The novel global tax rules environment dictated by the OECD through BEPS and other initiatives, alter the landscape for international tax arrangements. Also, the various tax authorities’ approach towards taxpayers’ planning may vary across the region. In some jurisdictions, high tax scrutiny is expected based on new mandatory disclosure rules already implemented (e.g., Argentina, Mexico), as well as different interpretations of the law, with multiple levels of interconnected federal, state, and municipal regulations, including capital control regulations.

Within this mix of multilateral measures and domestic challenges, investors and stakeholders must find tax alternatives to achieve long-term value in a highly complex tax-regulatory environment.
